Theodore Roosevelt National Park

IN HONOR OF A PRESIDENT

Theodore Roosevelt's passion for conservation flourished during his time in the Badlands. Experience the magic of this rugged landscape and live the strenuous life in the park year-round. The park is comprised of three separate areas of land. The North and South Units feature scenic drives, wildlife viewing, hiking, visitors' centers, ranger-led programs and much more. The undeveloped Elkhorn Ranch Unit preserves the site of Roosevelt's 'home ranch' in a remote area along the Little Missouri River.

HOW THE Theodore Roosevelt FOUNDATION CONTINUES HIS LEGACY

“Conservation means development as much as it does protection. I recognize the right and duty of this generation to develop and use the natural resources of our land; but I do not recognize the right to waste them, or to rob, by wasteful use, the generations that come after us.”

- Theodore Roosevelt, 1910
